Durban Ski Boat Club

Over the past weekend, our Durban competitive anglers pulled off a magnificent comeback at the Warner Beach Ski Boat Club Interclub Tournament, after a very tough first day on Saturday. The Durban Senior Team of Mark Winterboer (c), Jack Cheney and Robin Williams was among the many teams on the first day that struggled to bring a fish to the scales. On Sunday, however, they put in a massive effort, and each member of the team managed to rack up some excellent points with great catches, which shot them through to a final second-place finish. In the individual rankings, Jack Cheney finished 4th and Robin Williams 5th. Our Durban Junior team of Declan Hewison (c), Katelyn Jordaan and Heinrich Lubbe also had a slow start on Saturday, with only Heinrich managing to weigh a fish, but the team also showed great resilience, coming back strongly to finish in 5th place out of 11 teams. Katelyn placed 8th and Heinrich 10th in the individual rankings. Well done to both our hard-fighting teams.

The weather this week is once again going to mean very little fishing gets done, but there may still be a small wet window over the weekend for the guys who really need a fix. Hopefully these cut-off low-pressure systems will blow themselves out this week and leave us some good fishing weather for the Ladies' and Juniors' Competition on the 27th of this month. The competition will be another great event, loaded with great prizes. Look out for more details in the next week.

The Natal Deep Sea Angling Association's annual Golf Day is coming up on 11 October, and DSBC was well represented at this fun event last year. If you have not yet put a team together for the day and would like to, please contact Alan Gouveia. All funds raised will be going to Operation Bobbi Bear and to the SPCA, so please get involved.

OPEN WATER SWIMMING

SCUBA DIVING

The scuba crew finally got wet! Adrian Pearton reports on a very chilly Birthdays dive last Saturday, with visibility ranging between 5 and 7 metres in patches. The current just above the reef was stiff, although conditions on the bottom were much more manageable. Not the warmest dive, but good to finally get back in the water.

FREEDIVING

Freediving conditions haven't exactly been playing along lately, but that doesn't mean there isn't plenty to see close to shore. Our Environmental Officer, Billi-Jean, braved a cold snorkel on Saturday and was rewarded with an incredible sighting of three marble electric rays, including a newborn. A lovely reminder that you don't always have to go deep to experience the beauty and marine life right on our doorstep.

SPEARFISHING

It was a long day on the water for the spearfishing crew on Sunday, with an early launch from Durban and plenty of time spent searching the usual spots. Conditions were challenging, with poor visibility, rough seas and plenty of surge. Things improved significantly south of the Cuttings towards Amanzimtoti, where visibility opened up to 15 metres and more, although the fish remained elusive. The return journey towards Durban finally brought some luck around the Bluff, with several musselcracker sightings and a few Garrick hanging around a grey shark of around two metres. After hours of searching and adapting to the conditions, the team eventually found the fish they were looking for. A tough but rewarding day that proved once again that spearfishing is often about patience, persistence and making the most of the conditions when things finally come together.
